A leader in deploying strategic grantmaking, cross-sector partnerships and influence tools to drive social change and achieve impact.

KEY ACHIEVEMENTS

- Strategic philanthropy and grant-making: As a Vice President at The Rockefeller Foundation created - and directly managed - a $10 million per annum portfolio of grant-making that deploys the funding of journalism, film, storytelling and campaigns to shift narratives and influence decision-makers. Key projects include: Guardian Cities, an impact fund with the Sundance Institute, a VR film that shows the results of rural electrification in India and a campaign to give shift workers greater schedule stability. As President of the Board of Stonewall Community Foundation championed the ways that a foundation can add value for grantees in addition to a grant check, including leadership development, strategic advice and connections to other donors.
- Creating organizations. Designed and launched 100 Resilient Cities— a $160 million effort to support 100 cities worldwide in developing a resilience strategy and then accessing private and public sector funding for implementation. Managed the process to develop the vision and the governance and management structure for a brand new organization that is now a 75-person independent non-profit.
- Fundraising & cross-sector collaboration. Deployed professional experience across private, non-profit, government and philanthropy to form coalitions and access funding. Leveraged the Rockefeller Foundation brand and reputation to engage the private sector in resilience building: 100 Resilient Cities now has 70 external partners committing more than $200 million to member cities. Used a $3 million Rockefeller grant to a post-Superstorm Sandy recovery competition to leverage $1 billion in US government disaster funds being deployed in a smarter and more resilient way.
- Management and team leadership. Built and led high-performing teams of up to 33 people with a management style as a listener, collaborator and coach. The HUD Office of Public Affairs was the highest rated office in HUD under the government-wide 2011 Employee Viewpoint Survey Best Places to Work, and the office was rated 34% above the HUD average on 'leadership' and 46% on 'creativity and innovation are rewarded.' At The Rockefeller Foundation, the communications team awarded 90% for manager effectiveness in the 2014 Employee Engagement Survey.
- Board and trustee relations. Serve as President of the Board of Stonewall Community Foundation and have served on three other non-profit boards. Helped devise strategy for 5 day Rockefeller board retreat that takes place every five years. Managed positioning of Board Chair transition from David Rockefeller Jr. to Dick Parsons; and President transition from Judith Rodin to Raj Shah.
- Field-building. Positioned the Rockefeller Foundation as a globally-recognized leader in the new fields of impact investing and resilience. Deployed events, media and a book to solidify a legacy on impact investing. Built a powerful thought leadership platform on resilience including The Resilience Dividend (a book by Foundation president Judith Rodin) and Zilient, an online content and networking platform.
- Branding, messaging and communications. At HUD, positioned a cabinet agency known for inefficiency and corruption as a source of innovative policy in the midst of a national housing crisis. At Rockefeller, developed and implemented an influence strategy that deployed the foundation's brand, reputation, knowledge, networks, and convening power to leverage millions of additional dollars for priority work, catalyze shifts in public dialogue and change public policy and business practice.
